17.99.99.M1, Distance Education Credit Courses and Programs

Technology mediated instruction, including distance education programs and courses at Texas A&M University continue to be an important opportunity to extend the academic experience of Texas A&M to all students. Recent changes in the organizational structure and approval processes for distance education have caused the need for significant review and edit to the associated university rule. Please refer any questions you have at this time to Office of the Provost, 979-845-4016 or http://distance.tamu.edu/.